

ACCESSING DATA FROM DIFFERENT
MEMORY LOCATIONS IN THE SAME CYCLE

Abstract of the Disclosure

In a modified Harvard architecture, conventionally, read operations in the same cycle are only implemented when different memory banks are to be accessed by the different
5 read operation. However, when different sublines in the same memory bank are being accessed, cycles may be saved by accessing both sublines in the same cycle.